BETTING TERMS

Wager: A bet that is made.

Favorite: The expected straight-up winner in a game or event.

Underdog: The team that is expected to lose straight up.

Cover: The betting result on a point-spread wager. For a favorite to cover, it has to win by more than the spread—an underdog covers by winning outright or losing by less than the spread.

Money Line: A bet in which your team only needs to win. The point spread is replaced by odds.

Straight Bet: A wager in which you bet on a single game that carries a point spread, an over/under or a money line.

Point Spread Wager: A wager made on either the favorite to cover the point spread or underdog to win with the additional points (against the spread).

Over/Under Wager: A wager which depends on the combined total of the points/goals scored by two competing teams. One can bet the total will exceed or be less than a specified number.

Push: When the result of the game lands on the spread. The bettor does not win or lose, and the bettor gets their money back.

Teaser: A wager in which multiple teams are bet, but the bettor adjusts the spread in his/her favor in order to make the bet easier—all teams must win in order for you to win.

Parlay: A wager in which you pick multiple teams on one wager—all teams must win in order for you to win.
